INTRODUCTION

This directory is the result of a long process of investigation about religious groups in the Americas that began in 1997 as part of the Latin American Socio-Religious Studies Program (Programa Latinoamericano de Estudios Sociorreligiosos, PROLADES) under the directorship of Clifton L. Holland, who resides in San Jose, Costa Rica.

From 1990 to 1997 Holland coordinated a multi-disciplinary team in a study of ethnic and religious diversity of the Greater Los Angeles Metropolitan Area (GLAMA) from offices on the campus of the William Carey International University in Pasadena, California. One of the main results of this investigation was the creation of a database of all known religious groups in GLAMA and the production of a series of research reports on each of the seven regions of GLAMA. The GLAMA database included more than 12,500 listings for the five-county area, which include parts of Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino, Riverside and Ventura counties.

Whereas Holland had previously done extensive research on the growth and development of the Protestant movement in about 25 countries of the Americas, with a special focus on the Central American region since 1970, the GLAMA research project created a need to develop a classification system of all known religious groups in the world in order to understand the phenomena of religious diversity present in GLAMA, which has become the new major port of entry for immigrants from around the world to the USA.

Consequently, Holland decided to utilize the classification system developed by Dr. J. Gordon Melton in The Encyclopedia of American Religions (New York: Gale Research and Triumph Books, 1989) based on a typology of major religious traditions and denominational families and subfamilies. As a result, all of the religious groups in the GLAMA database were classified by Holland using Melton's typology, and certain modifications were made in the typology to accommodate Spanish-speaking denominations and independent churches. For information about this important study, see: <http://www.prolades.com/prolades1/glama/glama-home2.htm>

After the GLAMA research project was completed in 1997, Holland returned to his home in Costa Rica to begin a new phase of his research activities: a study of all religious groups in every country of the Americas. This new project was named RITA, Religion-In-The-Americas, and it coincided with the development of the Internet and the availability of more sophisticated computer systems, which enabled Holland and his colleagues to better coordinate their activities by e-mail and to develop a better delivery system for information sharing via the Internet and the World Wide Web. The end result was the current PROLADES website at www.prolades.com that contains web pages for each country of the Americas, plus Spain and Portugal, and an on-line search engine to access information in the RITA database: <http://www.prolades.com/searchengine/>

Now that all of the known religious groups in the Americas and the Iberian Peninsula (Spain and Portugal) have been identified and classified by Holland and his colleagues, we have begun the process of creating working hardcopy directories for each country in order to speed up the task of verifying and updating the information contained in the RITA database, as well as making the information available to the general public in Adobe Acrobat Reader format (pdf).

If you would like to assist us in the process, please go to the Country Research Associate (CRA) section of the PROLADES website to learn more about how you can be involved:

We would like to acknowledge the valuable assistance of Dr. Virgilio Zapata, Miguel Angel Suazo, John Durkovic, Galo Vásquez and the SEPAL team, as well as many others for their contributions to the development of PROLADES-RITA database on Guatemala, especially regarding information about Protestant denominations and service agencies. PROFILE OF RELIGION IN GUATEMALA

The Republic of Guatemala is the largest and most populous country in Central America. The nation is divided geographically by the central highlands that stretch east and west. Known as the "Land of Trees" and the "Land of Eternal Spring," Guatemala has also been steadily losing much of its animal and plant life, particularly since the 1950s, due to the process of economic modernization. Environmental deterioration is now threatening human society and the economy, but the flora and fauna have long suffered from human activities. From the early hunter and gatherer groups of Amerindians that arrived about 2,500 BC, to the sophisticated Mayan civilization of 400-900 C.E. in the Guatemalan highlands and lowlands (as well as in adjacent areas of Mexico, Belize, Honduras and El Salvador), where more than a million inhabitants depended on large-scale agricultural production to sustain their dominance in the region, to the Spanish colonial period (1492-1832) and the modern period (1832 to date), the natural environment of Guatemala has suffered the accumulative effects of accelerated human occupation.

The Classic Mayan civilization, which was dominated by large city-states in the Valley of Guatemala (where Guatemala City is now located), Tikal in the lowlands of the Petén, Copán in northwestern Honduras, and Palanque in the Chiapas foothills, rapidly declined after 900 C.E. due to environmental changes (mainly drought), over-population, internal social and political disintegration, and competition with rival Amerindian empires (Toltec and Mixtec), according to many scholars. The center of Mayan civilization shifted from the previous city-states to new ceremonial centers in the central and northern Yucatán Peninsula in present-day Mexico, such as Chichén Itzá and Mayapán, during the period 600-1,500 C.E.

By the time the Spanish conquistadors, colonists, and Roman Catholic priests arrived in the early 1500s, the Mayan civilization in Guatemala was in disarray and engaged in bitter rivalry with other major Amerindian groups, which facilitated Spanish domination. By 1650, disease, war and exploitation had greatly reduced the size of the Amerindian population in Guatemala, from about one million in 1500 C.E. to only about 200,000 in 1650. The Spanish and Creole (American-born of pure Spanish blood) elite ruled over the growing mestizo population (of mixed Spanish and Indian heritage) and the dwindling Amerindian population, which declined from 80 percent of the total population in 1778 to 65 percent in 1893, to less than half the population in 1973, according to government authorities.

Today, Guatemalan society is divided into two main categories: Indian and Ladino (non-Indians of Spanish descent). However, the major factors for determining the size of the Indian population by the government have been language and dress, rather than race, which tends to underestimate the strength of the Amerindian population. The Council of Mayan Organizations (COMG) claimed that about 65 percent of the Guatemalan population was Indian in 1990. However, Ladinos control the nation's political and economic life, as well as determining its social standards: "to be accepted outside one's own Indian community one has to look, act, and talk like a ladino," according to Tom Barry in Inside Guatemala (1992). Ethnic discrimination permeates Guatemalan life, and Indians must shed their traditional dress and language and assume a Ladino cultural identity to achieve social acceptance and to succeed in the dominant society.

According to Wycliffe Bible Translators' Ethnologue (1992), the population of Guatemala was about 9,340,000 in 1990, with 55 percent being Amerindian, 44 percent Mestizo, and about one percent other races. Fifty-two dialects are spoken in Guatemala among 23 ethnolinguistical groups, with Spanish being the dominant language (44 percent), followed by the principal Mayan languages of Quiché, Mam, Cakchiquel and Kekchí. Spanish is the major trade language because most of the Amerindian languages are linguistically distinct, which hampers communication outside one's own ethnic group. About 100,000 Black Caribs (Afro-Amerindian) speak Garifuna in Central America, but only about 16,700 live in Guatemala, mainly on the Caribbean coast. Additional ethnic components of the Guatemalan population include English-speaking, Afro-American West Indians on the Caribbean coast, Middle Easterners (mainly Lebanese and Jews), Caucasians (mainly Germans and U.S. citizens), Chinese and Koreans.

Politically, Guatemala achieved its independence from Spain in 1821-1823, after nearly 300 years of Spanish colonial rule when the Captaincy-General of Guatemala became the United Provinces of Central America, and when, in 1838, the Republic of Guatemala was created under rebel leader Rafael Carrera (1838-1865). In 1852, Carrera signed a concordat with the Vatican, repealed the anti-clerical legislation established under the rule of Francisco Morazán (1829-1838), reinstated the Catholic religious orders, and allowed the Catholic clergy to operate the nation's few schools. However, after the death of Carrera in 1865, the Liberal Justo Rufino Barrios came to power (1871-1885) and the Roman Catholic Church was again subjected to harsh legislation, the Jesuits were again expelled, the archbishop and bishops were exiled, tithes were eliminated, convents and monasteries were closed, church property was confiscated, priests were prohibited from wearing clerical garb and were barred from teaching, religious processions were proscribed, and civil marriage was declared obligatory. These anti-clerical laws so crippled the Catholic Church in Guatemala that it has never recovered its former influence.

It was President Barrios, in 1873, who established freedom of speech and worship in Guatemala, and who was responsible for the official introduction of Protestantism into the country by inviting the Presbyterian Church in the USA [now an integral part of the Presbyterian Church (USA)] to send missionaries to Guatemala in 1882, allegedly "to counteract the influence of the Catholic clergy" in its opposition to Liberal reform. The Rev. John Clark Hill arrived in late 1882 to begin the work, although Hill did not speak Spanish upon his arrival and his first activities were among 30-40 distinguished English-speaking foreigners who were already Protestants. Nevertheless, Hill and his successors succeeded in establishing churches and schools in a country that had expelled the first Protestant minister to arrive in Guatemala City in the 1840s.

By late 1885 Hill and his assistant Luis Canales had begun to preach and teach in Spanish, and had initiated a process that led to the formal establishment of the Central Presbyterian Church in 1888. In addition to planting churches, the Presbyterians founded the American School in 1883, a hospital and nursing school in 1912, a bookstore in 1915, a girl's school in 1918 and an industrial training center in 1919. By 1935, there were 22 organized Presbyterian churches and 198 preaching points with 2,805 baptized members in Guatemala. The English worship services in Guatemala City, begun by Hill in 1882, were continued by a succession of pastors. Today, the nondenominational Union Church, located in Plazuela España, traces its founding to that date. This church is the oldest Protestant congregation in Guatemala.

Previously, other efforts had been made by Baptist missionaries and laymen in British Honduras to distribute the Scriptures among the inhabitants of a small British colony of the shores of Lake Isabel in eastern Guatemala, near the border of the two countries, between 1822 and 1835, under the auspices of the British Honduras Bible Society. It was during a similar journey by Frederick Crowe in 1841 from Belize City to Abbottsville, where he resided for two years as a missionary and school teacher, that the English Baptist colporteur began to make plans to travel to Guatemala City by way of Salamá, a journey that he accomplished in 1843 with a cargo of Bibles and other evangelical literature. Crowe, although supported in his educational and missionary efforts in Guatemala City by a few Liberals, was opposed by the Catholic clergy and Conservative politicians, who forced his expulsion from Guatemala in 1846. Although no permanent organizational structure was established, the English Baptists have the distinction of being the first known Protestants to work in the Republic of Guatemala.

The third Protestant missionary organization to work in Guatemala was the Central American Mission (now known as CAM International, with headquarters in Dallas, TX), which sent Mr. & Mrs. Edward Bishop to Guatemala City in 1899. The first CAM church, located in the capital city, became the Mother Church to hundreds of CAM congregations throughout the country. In 1935, there were 63 organized churches and 185 preaching points. The Central American Evangelical Church Association (CAM-related), founded in 1927, became one of the largest Protestant denominations in Guatemala, and CAM has also had an important role in training pastors and lay leaders for the non-Pentecostal Evangelical movement through its Central American Bible Institute (founded in 1926) and more recently through the Central American Theological Seminary (known as SETECA), created in 1965.

By 1935, additional Protestant mission agencies were also working in Guatemala. The Church of the Nazarene traces its origins to work begun in 1901 in Cobán and Zacapa by missionaries affiliated with the Pentecostal Mission of Nashville, Tennessee, which later became part of the Church of the Nazarene. In 1902, the California Friends Mission (Quakers) began its ministry in the southeastern part of the country, near the border with Honduras and El Salvador, with headquarters in the Department (province) of Chiquimula. Representatives of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church arrived in 1908, and began work in Guatemala City and Quezaltenango, the nation's second-largest city. The Christian Brethren, known in Guatemala as the Free (Plymouth) Brethren, were established in 1924 through the ministry of Carlos Kramer in Quezaltenango. Others were the National Evangelical Mission (1923), National Association of Baptist Churches (1926), and the German Lutheran Church (1929).

In 1916, Thomas Pullin and Charles Furman of the United and Free Gospel Missionary Society (Turtle Creek, PA) arrived in Guatemala to begin an itinerant evangelistic ministry in El Quiché, Totonicapán and other western departments, but they returned to the USA in 1920 to strengthen their base of support. When Furman and his family returned to Guatemala in 1922, he was affiliated with another holiness denomination, the Primitive Methodist Church (PMC). Later that year, the PMC absorbed the work begun by independent holiness missionary Albert Hines in Totonicapán in 1912, which was then under the supervision of the Rev. Amos Bradley. In 1926, the PMC acquired the property owned by independent medical missionary Dr. C. F. Secord in Chichicastenango, who had begun work there in 1900, and Secord continued his ministry under the auspices of the PMC.

In 1934, while on furlough in the USA, Furman joined the Church of God International (Cleveland, TN) and returned to Guatemala to become that denomination's first missionary in the country. He proceeded to visit PMC churches and encourage the leaders to join him in the ranks of the Church of God, which resulted in 14 PMC churches switching their affiliation to the Church of God. By 1980, this denomination had grown to 664 churches and 234 missions with 34,450 members.

The Assemblies of God began work in the Department of Jutiapa in 1937, as an extension of its ministry in El Salvador. Following a healing campaign by T. L. Osborn in Guatemala City in 1953, the work began to grow more rapidly in the central highlands, and by 1980 churches had been established throughout the country. By 1980, there were 748 congregations with 35,909 members.

The Prince of Peace Evangelical Church Association was formed in 1956 by José María Muñoz in Guatemala City, among a group of believers that had left the Central Assembly of God. Many of the early members of this new denomination had been members of other Evangelical churches, but were drawn to Muñoz' ministry because of his popular radio ministry and powerful Pentecostal preaching. By 1980 the church had more than 500 congregations.

The Elim Christian Mission began as a house church in 1962 in Guatemala City, led by a well-known medical doctor and radio personality, Dr. Otoniel Ríos, who became an Evangelical during the Evangelism-in-Depth campaigns in 1961. In 1973, Ríos terminated his medical practice to devote himself to a full-time pastoral ministry and building up a large central church, which grew to 3,000 members in 1979 after the congregation moved into a new auditorium. By 1980, the ministry of Elim included 68 churches and 50 preaching points with a total membership of about 20,000, with a growing association of sister churches in El Salvador.

Other Evangelical denominations that began work in Guatemala prior to 1960 were the following: Emmanuel Church Association (1940), Interdenominational Evangelical Mission (1944), Baptist Convention of Guatemala (related to the Southern Baptist Convention, 1946), Spanish American Inland Mission (The Calvary Church Association, 1947), Galilee Church of God (Church of God, Anderson, Indiana, 1947), Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod (1947), Church of God of Prophecy (1950), United World Mission (1952), Defenders of the Faith (1952), Bethesda Church of God (1952), Apostolic Church of Faith in Jesus Christ (1953), International Church of the Foursquare Gospel (1956), Palestine Pentecostal Church (1956), the Missionary Church of God (1957), and the independent Churches of Christ (1959).

During the 1960s and 1970s, additional Protestant groups initiated ministry in Guatemala: the New Jerusalem Church of God (1960), Assembly of Christian Churches (1962), Episcopal Church (1962), Evangelical Church of the Holy Spirit (1962), Door to Heaven Pentecostal Church (1963), Christian & Missionary Alliance (1963), Evangelical Mennonite Church (1964), Pentecostal Church of God of America (1965), Eastern Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities (1968), Mount Bashan Evangelical Churches (1968), Voice of God Evangelical Church (1968), Springs of Living Water Church (1972), Pentecostal Church of God of New York (1972), Bethany Evangelical Mission (1972), the Word Christian Church (1976), Center of Faith, Hope and Love (1978), Christian Fraternity (1979) and the Jesus Christ is Lord Church (1980).

Despite differences of tradition, doctrine and practice, many of the leaders of the respective Protestant denominations in Guatemala met together periodically, although informally, to discuss common problems and resolve conflicts during the period 1909-1935. However, a formal structure was organized in 1935 to facilitate interdenominational cooperation, the Synod of the Evangelical Church in Guatemala, although it was not until 1937 that member organizations formally ratified the agreement. In 1951, the Evangelical Synod was restructured and its name changed to the Evangelical Alliance of Guatemala (AEG), now related to the World Evangelical Alliance.

It was under the auspices of the AEG that a vast interdenominational evangelistic campaign was conducted in 1961-1962 throughout the country, under the banner of "Evangelism-in- Depth” (EVAF), a program designed by missionary and national leaders of the Latin America Mission (LAM) in Costa Rica. Led by the LAM’s Kenneth Strachan, EVAF was hailed as a great success by the AEG and missionary leaders, due to more than 20,000 reported “professions of faith” that took place during the citywide campaigns and house-to-house visitation efforts.

*During the week of January 23-27, 1962, an interdenominational leadership retreat was held in Guatemala City, sponsored by AEG and World Vision International (Monrovia, CA), with the participation of about 1,500 pastors and missionaries from throughout Central America. During the opening ceremony for this event, on January 23, the President of Guatemala, Miguel Ydígoras Fuentes, and the Mayor of Guatemala City, Dr. Luis Fernando Galich, addressed the audience of about 3,000 and welcomed the participants, which was the first time in history that a Guatemalan president had participated in a Protestant rally. *This singular event and the two-year EVAF program was a symbolic turning point for Evangelicals in Guatemala, who lost their fear of being known as Evangelicals in public and began to openly evangelize their communities and aggressively plant new churches throughout the country.

This was a significant turning point in the history of the Protestant Movement in Guatemala and signaled a new era of rapid church growth in most areas of the country. Between 1960 and 1964, the total number of Protestant congregations increased from 566 nationally to 1,525; or in terms of national membership, from 25,470 to about 72,500, which represents an increase of 30 percent annually. By mid-1980, there were 6,448 Protestant congregations in Guatemala with 334,453 baptized members, and a Protestant community of 1,003,359 or about 13.8 percent of the national population of 7,262,419.

When the National Directory of the Protestant Movement in Guatemala was published in 1981, the largest denominations were the following: the Prince of Peace Evangelical Church (518 congregations with 33,670 members), Association of Central American Churches (823 congregations with 32,353 members), Assemblies of God (684 congregations with 31,505 members), Church of God-Cleveland (994 congregations with 30,032 members), Seventh-Day Adventist Church (216 congregations with 17,207 members), and the National Presbyterian Church (224 congregations with 16,263 members). All the other denominations had less than 10,000 members in 1980, but Pentecostal groups had 52.1 percent of all the Protestant church members in the country, compared to 6.3 percent for the Adventists, and 41.6 percent for other Free Church groups (non-Pentecostal). Of the six largest denominations in 1980, only three were Pentecostal.

During the period 1960-1980, Guatemala became a "showcase" for the growth of the Protestant Movement in Latin America, but the enthusiasm of Evangelical leaders regarding continued high rates of church growth in Guatemala often exceeded the reality. A series of public opinion polls taken between 1990 and 2001 in Guatemala helped to correct some of the erroneous growth projections made by Evangelical leaders: the CID-Gallup company reported that the Protestant population was 26.4 percent in May of 1990 and 25 percent in April of 1996. Early in 2001, SEPAL conducted a public opinion poll in Guatemala that showed Protestants to be 25.3 percent of the national population. It seemed clear that the size of the Protestant population did not change in Guatemala while the number of Protestant congregations continued to increase: from about 6,450 in 1980, to 9,298 in 1987, to about 18,000 in 2001.

The fact that the percentage of Protestants from 1980 to 2000 has remained stable while the number of Protestant congregations has grown by 258 percent is an as yet little understood enigma. Some have suggested that there may have been an exodus of Protestant adherents in Guatemala during the 1980s-1990s due to discouragement about the performance of Evangelical politicians, such as Gen. Efraín Ríos Montt (military dictator during 1982-1983) and Jorge Serrano (president during 1990-1993), as well as disillusionment over the financial and sex scandals regarding popular American Evangelical TV personalities, such as Jim and Tammy Faye Bakker (1987) and Jimmy Swaggart (1991).

Another factor, during the period 1962-1996, is that Guatemala faced political and social upheaval caused by a brutal and bloody civil war between the "public security forces" of the conservative government and a series of Marxist-led revolutionary forces, which at the time of the Peace Talks in late-1996 were led by the Guatemalan National Revolutionary Unity (known in Spanish as the URNG). The 36-years of armed conflict caused an estimated 200,000 deaths, the forced exile to Mexico of about 250,000 people from conflictive zones, mainly among Native peoples in the central highlands, and about one million internal refugees.

The counterinsurgency campaign launched by dictator Gen. Efraín Ríos Montt (a self-declared Evangelical) and carried out by the military and the Civilian Defense Patrols in 1982-1983 strongly polarized Guatemalan public opinion against the government and caused civil rights organizations to begin a worldwide campaign against military aid to Guatemala, mainly from the U.S. government. The Guatemalan military was accused of genocide because of its program of systematic extermination of the Indian population. In November of 1986, a series of Peace Talks were held in Esquipulas, Guatemala, with representatives from most of the countries of Central America in an effort to bring peace to the convulsed region, but it was not until December of 1996 that a final Peace Accord was signed between the Guatemalan government and rebel forces.

During the 1980s, Evangelical public opinion was divided for and against support for Gen. Ríos Montt, who offended many people—Catholics and Evangelicals alike—by his public radio messages that blended anti-Marxist rhetoric with Evangelical sermons. The leadership of the Evangelical Alliance, which represents most Evangelical organizations in Guatemala, decided to back off from publicly supporting Ríos Montt and to distance themselves from his government. After alienating business, military and political opposition leaders, as well as the Catholic Church, Ríos Montt was overthrown by Defense Minister Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejía in August of 1983. Although Evangelicals were not persecuted after the ousting of Ríos Montt as head of State, there is no doubt that the public image of Evangelicals did suffer.

In 2001, the estimated size of the largest Protestant denominations in Guatemala was as follows: the Assemblies of God (139,000 members), Prince of Peace Church (93,700), Church of God-Cleveland (90,000), Association of Central American Churches (86,000), Calvary Church (59,400), Seventh-Day Adventist Church (46,400), Voice of God Church (44,500), Evangelical Mission of the Holy Spirit (38,700), Elim Christian Mission (36,600), Christian Brethren (33,800), and the National Presbyterian Church (30,100).

According to the SEPAL study in 2001, Catholics were 58 percent of the nation's population, Protestants 25 percent, other religions 3 percent, and none/no response 14 percent.

Other religions included native Amerindian religions (Animist), Garifuna religion, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (about 67,500 members), the Jehovah's Witnesses (about 14,100 members), Light of the World Church (Guadalajara, Mexico), Voice of the Cornerstone (Puerto Rico), The Family (Children of God), United Church of Religious Science, Christadelphians, Growing in Grace Churches (Miami, FL).

Guatemala is also home to the spectrum of the world's religions and now has small communities professing Judaism, Baha'i Faith, Islam (Palestinian Arabs), Buddhists/Chinese religions, Hinduism, and various Western Esoteric traditions—Psychic, Spiritualist and New Age.

The total population of Guatemala in 2000 was estimated at 11,385,300.
